

OPTION 1. SCENE TO ACT OUT (activity 2: What role do you play?)

---

Context: a couple meets at home after a day at work.
Imagine them in the dining room.

Boy: Christina! how was your day?

Girl: Good! I'm tired, but I got a lot done. Plus, I beat George at padel!

Boy: Woah! I didn't know you were so good at padel! Or does George just stink at it?

Girl: Oh, shut up—you're the one who stinks! How long has it been since you picked up a bat? Look at that belly!

Boy: Yeah, you're right. It's been too long since I worked out. Good thing you're in such good shape, you work out enough for the both of us!

Girl: Look how late it is! Have you made supper?

Boy: Do we have any pizzas left? What did you have in mind?

Girl: We've got lettuce and ingredients for a salad; we can also cook a couple of hamburgers. Didn't you realize how late it was? What's the matter, couldn't you have started getting supper ready? By the way, you haven't told me how your day went. Is everything OK?

Boy: Yeah, I'm just exhausted! I've been staring at the computer all day and answering calls from clients. They're a real pain in the butt. They must be in cahoots: they all call in and complain on the same day. What a mess! Would you mind making supper? I need to put my feet up... I'll set the table!

Girl: All right... but it might be good for you to do something to take your mind off work. How about you water the plants or do a load of laundry?

Boy: You're right, let me grab my headphones and get on it. Once I'm done, I'll set the table—by then it'll be time to eat.
